Knowles was of the opinion that it would work an outrage upon a clerk, as the fees of probate courts were small, and as the salary of probate clerks had been abolished the emoluments of the office would not amount to a great deal.

Burieigh was of the opinion of Judge Knowles, who, continuing his remarks, said that outside three counties the clerk of the district court will be a very small office.

The Missouri river scheme, which has been uppermost in the public mind, was first examined. Mr. Milier does not consider this a feasible source, basing the calculation from a pumping standpoint. He says the supply of water to be derived from the Missouri river is abundant, and at the present time of an excellent quality. There is, however, a probability of future contamination by the construction of large smelting work and manufactories with the accompanying cities and towns along the Missouri and Jefferson rivers, above the source of supply. In connection with the canal project which has been suggested, he thinks the water would be unit for use without filtration, and the cost of construction is uncertain, while the feasibility can The county of Missoula shall have five. tion is uncertain, while the feasibility can only be ascertained by surveys. He be-lieves such a scheme, by reason of the amount of arid land that could be re-claimed, would be a better investment for private capital.

Of the pumping plan he says:

"A pumping plant drawing a supply from the river near Stubb's Ferry could be constructed for a less outlay than the canal and pumping works combined, and as in either case a pumping lift of several hundred feet would be required. I have only made an estimate for the pumping system directly from the river.
